

Highland Environmental Network Training Programme 2010/2011

What is HEN?

The Highland Environmental Network (HEN) is a voluntary member organisation promoting environmental education in the Highlands. The organisations currently represented on the Management Group are:

Highland Council, British Trust for Conservation Volunteers Scotland, Aigas Field Centre, Glachbeg Croft Education Centre, and Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA) and other interested parties (individuals and groups).

HEN exists to:-

- Promote environmental education, in its widest sense, in all sectors of the Highland community
- Facilitate sharing of environmental information and expertise
- Encourage the involvement of individuals and community groups in environmental debate and action

Programme of workshops for Personal and
Continuing Professional Development
2010 - 2011

In conjunction with the Forum for Environmental Volunteering
Activity
And
Cairngorms National Park

This programme of workshops and training events is aimed at everyone with an interest in encouraging others, particularly children and members of their local community, to become involved in caring for our environment.

The courses will be delivered by a range of providers - all are members of the Highland Environmental Network (HEN).

These providers include:

Aigas Field Centre
Glachbeg Croft
Abriachan Forest Trust
British Trust for Conservation volunteers
Cairngorms National Park
Forum for Environmental Volunteering
Activity

The fees for each course will go some way to covering the cost of these courses and ensuring they will run with even a small number
